Murray High Comes In Second In Track Meet Yesterday

By John Koertner
Friday afternoon at Carlisle Cutchin Stadium the Murray High boys made a very good showing against the superior and heavily-manned Tilghman track team.

Jerry Buchanan was the big gun for Murray winning the Broad Jump with a leap of 19 feet, 11 inches, and easily winning the 880 yard jaunt in 2 minutes 12 seconds. He was also anchor man on the mile relay team.

Dick Stout also gave a fine performance, winning the 440 yard dash in the good time of 59 seconds. He led off the winning mile relay and gave a good effort in the 180 yard hurdles which was won by Shaw of Tilghman.

Tommy Wells showed his mettle in extending Shaw to the limit in the low hurdles. Also he ran anchor on the 880 yard relay team which finished second to Tilghman, being beaten narrowly at the finish after picking up a 4 yard deficit. He too was on the winning mile relay team.

Donnie McCord was second in the 880 yard relay team. Murray was noosed out by Tilghman who is the best in that event in Western Kentucky. He also finished fourth in the shot-put.

In the 880 yard relay event, Murray was noosed out by Tilghman in the good time of 1 minute 37 1/2 seconds. J. Koertner, N. Shroat, C. Stout, and T. Wells participated.

Murray showed overwhelming superiority in the feature mile relay winning under wraps. They have won their last three attempts, and in the event broke the existing event record. The best time, 3 minutes, 38 seconds, was set at Henderson recently and is a Western Kentucky Conference

Miracle Miller Will Run Today

FRESNO, Calif., May 12 (AP) — The sun came out in Fresno today and the chances were good that the fabulous John Landy would run the mile in less than four minutes for the sixth time in his career at the 30th annual West Coast Relays tonight.

After a drenching Friday, the clay track that is rated by many the fastest in this country, dried off in the late afternoon and the prospects are the Australian miracle miler will have the best chance he ever has had to break his own world mark of 3:58, set in Finland in 1954.

"This is a real good track," said Landy after his final wind springs Friday. "If the weather stays good, I hope to better four minutes. A lot of this depends, however, upon the opposition."

The major threat to Landy winning his first race in the United States will come from Ron Delany, the Irish star from Villanova University. In his initial run here last Saturday at Los Angeles, Landy was beaten one step by fellow-Australian Jim Bailey, who attends the University of Oregon.

"However, I don't feel badly about that in the least," said Landy. "After all, he was clocked in 3:58.6. I ran 3:58.7 and after the long airplane trip that is as well as I expected to do."

Bailey is busy running in the northern division Pacific Coast Conference meet for Oregon today, so there is no chance for revenge. But Landy is anxious to make his final appearance in this country a winning one.

South Team Is Selected For Annual North-South Classic

Kentucky, long considered "the basketball state" of the country, again has the honor of providing the most players for the annual North-South Cage Classic, which will be played in the Murray (Ky.) State College gymnasium on June 16.

The dozen boys on the squad make up one of the finest basketball teams the South can produce, states Selections committee chairman M. O. Wraether, in announcing the selections. The Southern team, announced first this year by the Selections Committee, represents ten states.

Kentucky's representatives are "King" Kelly Coleman of Wayland high school, Roger Newman of Greenville high school, and Raymond "Corky" Whitlow of Central City high school.

Other members of the all-star team are Albert Ellison Jr. of Perry County high school in Linden, Tenn.; Gene Arrington of Palo Duro high school in Amarillo, Texas; Carney Crisler, North high school in Denver, Colorado; Howard Hunt of Woodrow Wilson high school in Beckley, W. Va., will be no stranger to the North-South game. His high school coach, Jerome Van Meter, was one of the winning Southern coaches from last year's game.

Hunt is 6-2 and plays guard. He averaged 26 points in as many games.

Fred LaCour is the first Californian to be picked for the North-South game. LaCour can best be described by saying "all-anything." He was selected for all-American honors by Dell and the National Education Association. The 6-4, 185-pounder, plays all three positions.

Jack Moreland is a 6-7 center and Dell All-American. At Minden, La., high school he averaged 30.2 points for 65 games. Moreland was selected for all-state honors three years straight.

Jack Pirrie from the "Show Me" state did just that while he played basketball at Maplewood Richmond-Heights high school in Missouri. He averaged 18.1 points during the 1955-56 season. He was named to All-American teams by Scholastic and NEA magazines.

Dennis Walker of Newton, was the "Most Valuable Player" in the Kansas State tournament. The 6-6 center was the big wheel in his team's achieving the state championship. He averaged 21 points for 22 games.

Dick Soergel will hold down a forward slot on the Southern team. The 6-2, 175-pounder earned all-city, all-state, all-conference and all-tournament honors while at Capital Hill high school in Oklahoma City. Soergel's average for 29 games was 18.1.

These twelve boys will meet in Murray, Ky., on June 10 and begin a week of practice, which will be climaxed by the eighth annual North-South game on Saturday night, June 16.

Missionary Will Address CWF Paducah Meeting Next Week

Mrs. John Chatfield, a missionary now on furlough from the Belgian Congo, will be principal speaker at the District Conference of the Christian Women's Fellowship to be held Friday, May 18, at First Christian Church, Paducah.

Mrs. Chatfield with her late husband entered foreign service following World War II. They went to the Philippines in 1947 to help re-establish Disciples of Christ work there. While her husband, an architect and builder, supervised a reconstruction of war-torn churches, schools, and other facilities, Mrs. Chatfield helped to reorganize the office work of the Philippine Federation of Christian Churches. They were later transferred to the Belgian Congo for similar service.

The meeting is scheduled to get underway at 10:30 a.m. C.D.S.T., according to Mrs. Lewis C. Sowell of Clinton, district secretary of C.W.F.

Classes and a panel discussion will be presented by a team composed of the following speakers: Mrs. John Chatfield, a missionary now on furlough from the Belgian Congo; Miss Mary Ellen LaRue, executive secretary of the Kentucky C.W.F.; Mrs. Newton Fowler, Fort Thomas, and Mrs. Ewing Graham, Henderson, both members of the C.W.F. State Board.

Mrs. John Pasco of Murray served as county secretary under the leadership of district secretary Mrs. Lewis C. Sowell.

Police are anxious about a small boy who disappeared.

CHICAGO, May 12 (AP) — Adm. "the wispy" boy who ran away from home turned to anxiety today with police searching for him for the 12th day.

His mother, Eileen Rausch, 32, published a letter to her elusive son, Leo, promising he would not be spanked for running away. "We love you and we want you with us," she wrote. "Your grandparents, your father, your brothers, your sisters and I are terribly worried for you."

Mrs. Rausch, knowing her son's fondness for wearing clean clothes, also held out the promise of having fresh garments ready for the boy when he returned. "I will cook all the things you like to eat, and we will have a little party," she added.

Leo has baffled intensive efforts by a 30-man police search party since he vanished April 30 after telling a schoolmate, "I'm getting out of here."

He has been spotted many times in a neighborhood where his family is formerly lived. However, police have been unable to close in on the quick-minded lad.

The latest reports of Leo's whereabouts came Friday from two women. One said she saw a little boy with a small bald spot on the back of his head sitting in a church. Leo's mother said her son had such a spot caused by a minor infection.

Another woman reported a boy resembling Leo had asked her for money so he could catch a bus.

Mrs. Rausch and police had believed that Leo was clever enough to take care of himself. But authorities now fear he may have run into foul play because of his long absence from home.

Mrs. Rausch told police Friday Leo was able to travel through much of Chicago without trouble. "He does not know street names, but he has a photographic memory for buildings, intersections and parks which he uses as landmarks," she said.

Britain Has Apologized To Russia, Eden

LONDON, May 12 (AP) — Prime Minister Anthony Eden's embarrassed government admitted today it secretly apologized to the Russians for the behavior of a British frogman who vanished near Russian ships in Portsmouth harbor.

The Foreign Office confirmed Russia's unexpected announcement of an exchange of notes on the incident.

The notes, broadcast by Radio Moscow Friday night, disclosed more of the incident to the Russians than Eden had told the British Parliament.

Broadcast A "Bitter Shock" Political sources said the broadcast came as a "bitter shock" to the Eden government. This was supported by the fact that the Foreign Office did not even confirm the existence of the notes for 14 hours after Moscow published the text.

The text of the British note, however, still did not explain exactly what the skin diver, Lt. Cmdr. Lionel Crabb, was doing at the time. The government has "presumed" him dead.

The Foreign Office continued its tight-lipped silence on the case, limiting itself merely to releasing the official British answer to a Soviet demand for an explanation of the case.

At the regular noon briefing, a Foreign Office spokesman would say only that the British note went "somewhat further" than Eden's statement to Parliament.

He parried newsmen's persistent questions as to whether Russia broke confidence in making the notes public.

"It is customary for a government to reveal its own notes," was his reply.

Plan No Protest Informed sources said no protest was planned.

The British note was dated May 9, the day after Eden refused to tell Parliament about Crabb on the grounds it was "not in the public interest." The Soviet note was dated May 4.

Other British sources said today it was known that Russian frogmen spied on Royal Navy ships which visited Leningrad last October.

The sources brought up the Leningrad incident in an attempt to relieve Eden of some of his acute embarrassment over the Crabb controversy.

They also said a Russian visitor to a new British destroyer was caught with a miniature camera in a brown paper parcel.

The Moscow radio broadcast said the USSR embassy in London asked the British Foreign Office what a frogman was doing diving near the three ships that brought Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Communist Party First Secretary Nikita S. Khrushchev on a state visit to Britain.

The British said the diver seen by Soviet sailors about 7:30 a.m. April 19 was "in all probability" Crabb.

"His presence near the destroyer was without any permission whatsoever, and her majesty's government expressed regret at this incident," the British note said.

The Soviet note said Russian sailors saw the frogman, clad in a black lightweight diving suit and wearing flippers on his feet, surface for a minute or two. Then he disappeared.

BRAGA, Portugal (AP) — Village shoemaker Miguel Costa had been known to throw furniture and crockery in the brook near his home when he flew into rages, but Friday he went one further.

He picked up his wife and four children and threw them into the water. Police said. Neighbors dragged them out of the shallow stream.

Committee Unready To Name Candidate For Senate Seat

By JAMES R. RENNESEN

United Press Staff Correspondent

FRANKFORT, May 12 (AP) — The Democratic Party's State Central executive committee met here today but its members appeared unready to select a candidate for the four remaining years of the last Sen. Alben W. Barkley's term in the United States Senate.

The meeting was called by Robert Humphreys, state highway commissioner and committee chairman, for 11 a.m. (C.D.T.), at the Capitol Hotel.

The call was something of surprise and apparently caught the backers of Sen. Earl C. Clements, who dominate the committee, off guard.

The committee has several possible courses of action. It can choose a nominee to run for the four-year Senate term in November; it can decide on some different method of choosing the nominee, or it can set another meeting for a later date and adjourn. The third course seemed the most probable.

Clements backers would prefer to delay nomination of a candidate for the short term until after the May 29 primary election, in which Clements is seeking re-election against former congressman Joe B. Bates, who has the backing of Gov. A. B. Chandler's administration.

They feel confident that Clements will defeat Bates and thus put them in a stronger position to select the candidate for the Barkley seat after the primary.

Administration leaders have charged, however, that the real motive for delaying action would be to give Earl Clements another chance if he loses to Bates.

Bates last Monday offered to withdraw from his race against Clements in return for the committee's nomination for the short term.

Press Gets Nautilus View

By H. D. QUIGG

United Press Staff Correspondent

ABOARD THE NAUTILUS, May 12 (AP) — The USS Nautilus, history's first atomic-powered vessel, left its Groton, Conn., base for New York today with test exercises scheduled along the way for a press party aboard.

The atomic-powered submarine will make an overnight run to New York, where it is to get a harbor reception tomorrow in its first appearance there.

The purpose of the trip is to open armed forces week Sunday by cruising up and down the Hudson River so New Yorkers and Jerseyans can take a look at the ship which has started a new naval era and pointed the way to revolutionary civilian uses of atomic power.

Twelve newsmen were scheduled to make the trip from the submarine base at Groton to New York as guests of the Navy. Tonight the Navy was to put the Nautilus through its paces in deep water for them. Her speed, maneuverability, and ability to stay underwater indefinitely make her one of the deadliest warships ever built.

The Nautilus was scheduled to arrive off the tip of lower Manhattan in New York Harbor around noon Sunday and receive the city's harbor welcome.

The New York Police Department helicopter division will give an aerial salute. Fireboats will arc their sprays skyward in welcome. Ferries, harbor boats, and commercial liners will whistle their traditional hellos.

The Nautilus will poke its bulbous nose into the Hudson and cruise at a moderate pace to the George Washington Bridge. There she will turn back downriver and proceed back to her base at Groton. She will not tie up in New York.

The Nautilus is the first submarine to be driven by steam, as well as the first vehicle in history to get its power from nuclear energy. The heat from a "core" of uranium provides the steam for the turbines that turn the propellers. Because the reactor power plant requires no oxygen, the Nautilus can remain submerged for as long as its crew can stand the confinement.

Armed with hydrogen fury comparable to millions of tons of TNT, they could speed 3000 miles over oceans or continents in a matter of minutes to wipe out an enemy metropolis.

GRAND JURY TO BE COMMENDED

The Grand Jury report Thursday must have come as a shock to some people in the city who have felt that "we have no juvenile delinquency in Murray."

The Grand Jury report does not indicate that we do have juvenile delinquency, but it certainly does indicate that the people of Murray should be cognizant that a situation has developed which could lead into trouble for many people.

The so called "gangs" are at the present time, in our opinion, just groups, and the word "gangs" really gives them undue "glory."

We wish to commend the May Grand Jury in looking into the situation in Murray, and bringing to light a condition which, if let alone, could possibly develop into something serious.

This condition points up too, the responsibility of first, the parents, and then the schools and society. The school authorities did well to ban the insignia of the various organizations, because with this feature out of the way, the groups lose a cohesive factor.

We think it behooves all parents to work along lines whereby the real values in this life are constantly pointed out. Rock and Roll music may be all right by itself, and hot rods may be all right as one outlet, but if and when all values are represented by "music, rods and tripe literature," then a change is desirable.

We believe in young people having fun, and we sincerely believe that young people today are no more than young people of yesterday. The big change is the interpretation that society places on their activity.

We think it behooves parents especially to bring out in daily living that it is not smart to drink, TV ads to the contrary, and the inevitable end to which it will lead.

Self control, self discipline, high ideals, setting an example for others to follow, believing in God and Jesus Christ, and living accordingly, are the real values which have to be brought to the front.

The family devotional is one of the best methods we know of to acquaint children of a family with God and prayer. It is not a substitute for church and Sunday School, but it will certainly implement it.

Placing God first will have as much effect on young people as it does on adults, and parents have a grave responsibility to see that they have every opportunity to learn more about their Savior.

- SPORT PARADE -

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Carnegie Hall can never be the same today after presentation of an all-star card on which Lou Nova fought a tough draw with William Shakespeare and then literally kayaked Alfred Noyes.

If that sounds confused, you've got nothing on the fight mob. Because a goodly number—formal in blue suits, brown shoes and red ties—mingled with other patrons of the arts Tuesday night to hear the former heavyweight challenger present a "spring poetry recital."

And the bug-eyed boxing men will forget Nova's knockout by Joe Louis a lot faster than they will Lou's mauling of the muses.

One old doll in a tuxedo summed it up for the Uptown mob when she voted:

"Mister Nova's voice was mellifluous, his enunciation was precise and he knew his lines faultlessly."

"We're All Punched," Mushky Jackson summed it up for the downtown mob when he voted:

"Jeez, I think we're all punched." Nova, it must be confessed, was even more nervous in the dressing room than before the Lolita bout.

Munching aspirin, he kept checking with flat-nosed Mike Dowd, a former sparring partner, to see what the gate looked like.

When, finally, the bell rang, Nova moved into the spotlight and intoned:

"Mary had a little lamb . . . Willie the Beard" Gilzberg popped his gum and whispered:

"I told you he fought too long." Pronounced it correctly.

"Hah," snorted Nova. "That's so you guys would know at least one poem I am about to render. He didn't say 'perm,' either."

Lou launched then into "all the world's a stage." He announced, proudly, that it was by "William Shakespeare, the immortal bard."

"And a pretty good halfback at Notre Dame," said Hymie the Mink Wallman in a strident aside.

Lou ignored it and orated for a half hour. Then he took a powder between rounds while a couple of female middleweights sang, as Broadway Charley Jones put it, like real informers.

"When I was one and 20," one yodeled, and some of the boys thought it kinda nasty to remind Lou that at that age he was a "comer."

LOST &amp; FOUND

LOST: Meeker made brown leather sedan. The small colored driver, stowed their luggage in the boot, but Val noticed that every now and then he glanced apprehensively up at the sky as though he were afraid.

"Better get going. Better get going quick," the driver kept muttering.

Val was sensitive to his urgency in view of what Jane had told her, but she still believed that Jane must have exaggerated. The main point that weighed with her was that Bruce had not only urged her to come but he had smiled at her with the old intimate friendliness.

As the car turned down the curved drive she saw John, Jane and Dirk standing on the steps of the veranda waving to her. She had a sudden feeling of leaving behind friends who were inexpressibly dear to her. The sudden sharp sense of loss had been caused by her parting with Dirk. But why? He was her good friend, her very good friend, but she didn't love him. Surely she loved Bruce, who sat beside the native driver, his back toward the two girls?

They drove along the main highway, through the center of town out to where native shacks were cluttered on each side of the road. Bruce half-turned his head to comment.

"These slums are pretty appalling, aren't they?"

Cynthia leaned toward him and laid a slim hand on his shoulder. "Awful, Bruce, you can't guess how awful. They breed all the diseases Daddy is investigating."

"Can't anything be done about them?" Val asked.

"The government does try, but directly it clears one slum away, another springs up. It's the age-old problem of over-population. And the absurd superstitions believe the natives still cling to don't help matters any."

"You don't believe in the native superstitions?" Bruce asked.

"Of course not," she laughed. "All this bother about a three-legged cat and dummies and zombies — well, really."

"What's a zombie?" Bruce asked with interest.

"Oh, it's just a dead person who refuses to remain dead," she said casually. "Can you imagine anything more ridiculous?"

Bruce said nothing. He was staring straight ahead at the darkening roadway.

Val glanced at Bruce's broad back. He was still staring ahead at the road. "Mrs. Carraway was telling us about dummies and zombies this afternoon. She made them sound pretty real."

"Oh, Jane is a romantic. She likes to believe in them. No one with any sense can believe that once a person is dead they don't remain dead. If dead people didn't die and die forever, what would happen to us all? But if you want to believe in these silly superstitions, why not?" Cynthia shrugged gracefully.

They were passing through Spanish Town and the conversation was dropped. Cynthia was eagerly pointing out the places of historical interest to Bruce, telling him this was their oldest town in Jamaica, the original seat of the government. She asked the driver to pause so that they could look at historical Government House with its lovely balcony and spacious courtyard.

The driver, muttering at the delay, kept glancing up at the sky. The dark storm clouds had blotted out the sunset and as they climbed slowly into the mountains darkness fell swiftly. The foliage on either side of the road was dense, great cottonwood and breadfruit trees, magnolia and poinsettia trees and royal palms. It seemed to Val's overwrought imagination that they were a threatening array of trees defying anyone to penetrate their density, as though they were guarding some secret. Suddenly she wished intensely that she was back at the brightly lit Myrtle Bank Hotel with Jane and John and Dirk.

Churchill Is Told To "Go Home"

By CHARLES M. McCANN
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 Winston Churchill, Britain's grand old man, is being greeted in West Germany today by signs like "Churchill, go home."

Churchill arrives in Germany this afternoon to receive Thursday, in the ancient city of Aachen, a prize for promoting European unity.

The signs are a reminder to Churchill, and to the world, that Germany wants back the territory which was handed over to Polish and Russian occupation at the Potsdam Conference in 1945.

This issue is one that is seldom mentioned among the many that have arisen out of World War II.

But it is one which the big powers have got to face some day. Poland and Russia regard the territory as permanently theirs. Germany never will agree.

Churchill's visit is the first he has made to Germany since the Potsdam Conference.

German Expellees Association
 The "Churchill, go home" and "Churchill not wanted" signs have been painted on public buildings in Aachen, faster than the police can erase them, but supporters of what is called officially the Association of German Expellees.

The association represents about 10 million Germans who were expelled from the territory east of the Oder and Neisse rivers which was turned over to Poland and Russian pending a final peace treaty.

These "expellees" number about one in five of the population of West Germany. They have their own little bloc of seats in Parliament.

In their demand that the lost territory be given back, they are supported not only by West Germans but by nearly all of the 18,500,000 Germans who live in the Russian-occupied zone.

Thursday, the expellees intend to hold a mourning service while Churchill is being given his prize.

They have asked townspeople to fly flags at half-staff.

The award to Churchill is the Karl or Charlemagne prize, awarded annually to a man who has helped promote European unity.

Emperor Charlemagne
 It is named for Charlemagne, the great emperor whose tomb according to tradition lies under the dome of Aachen Cathedral.

The "expellees" have nothing against Churchill himself. They admire him for his World War leadership even though he was their enemy. But they blame him for his part in the Potsdam Conference. They say that he has helped to divide, not unite Europe. Hence they say that Churchill has no right to the Charlemagne prize.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's government has tried to minimize the protests. But Adenauer and all his fellow leaders will insist, when the time comes, that Germany must get back its lost territory.

The issue will become a big one whenever the unification of Germany is taken up finally. Now the talk is merely of unifying the Western and Eastern parts of the country. But to Germans there will be no unification until they get back those 47,000 square miles of territory which Red-ruled Poland occupies to mention the East Prussian territory which Poland and Russia hold between them.

It is highly probable, too, if not certain, that some day, in one way or another, Germany will get back most of it.

CHAPTER 32
 Cynthia and Bruce were waiting in the lounge. They were standing close together, talking in low voices. She was almost as tall as he was, and with her ash-blond hair hanging to her shoulders, and her small pointed face raised to his, she looked strikingly lovely. Cynthia must have seen Dirk and Val approach with the Garraways, for she turned sharply.

"Oh, there you are, Miss Allison. We'd almost given you up and were about to start."

"But it's just five o'clock," Dirk remarked, glancing at his watch.

"Is it?" Cynthia answered casually. "I suppose it is because it's so dark that it seems later. But driver has been urging us for the past half hour to get on our way."

"Mightn't it be better to wait until morning?"

Bruce turned and glared at Dirk. "I have to get over tonight. They expected me much earlier. And even if we do run into a storm, what of it? He shrugged his large shoulders. "You're not scared, Cynthia?"

She laughed. "Scared, Bruce? Nonsense! I'm too used to this little old island to be scared of anything here. The driver is nervous, I admit, but these natives are scared out of their wits half the time."

"But sometimes they know what's going to happen better than we do," Jané broke in earnestly.

"Jane darling, we all know you adore native superstitions," Cynthia said laughingly. "But I'm afraid I've remained my old hard-headed English self. Besides, Daddy expects me back tonight. But of course," she added, rather too quickly, "if Miss Allison doesn't want to risk it, why doesn't she stay with you in Kingston tonight?"

"Nonsense, Cynthia. I'm sure Val isn't afraid," Bruce spoke abruptly and as he did so he turned and looked down at Val, and for the first time since Mrs. Featherstone's death, she smiled at her.

"You're not afraid, are you, Val?"

She found herself smiling back at him with a rush of love and gratitude in her heart.

"Of course I'm not afraid, Bruce."

"Then that's settled," Cynthia said. Her voice was slightly acid. "Well, we must be off." She gave her hand to the others as she said goodbye.

The hired car was an elderly Ford sedan. The small colored driver, stowed their luggage in the boot, but Val noticed that every now and then he glanced apprehensively up at the sky as though he were afraid.

"Better get going. Better get going quick," the driver kept muttering.

Val was sensitive to his urgency in view of what Jane had told her, but she still believed that Jane must have exaggerated. The main point that weighed with her was that Bruce had not only urged her to come but he had smiled at her with the old intimate friendliness.

BACKSTAIRS AT THE WHITEHOUSE

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Writer
WASHINGTON — Backstairs at the White House.

The trials of the military man know no end. Take the recent case of Roger Hagerty, handsome young son of White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty.

The elder Hagerty received a letter the other day intended for his son. It was from Roger's draft board, local board No. 27 in Albany, N. Y., where Roger originally registered.

The board sent a long form to be filled out, asking Roger whether he had undergone any military service in the past and his present occupation and whereabouts.

Jim Hagerty set down and wrote the board an apologetic note, saying Roger could not answer the inquiry at this time because he was a regular officer in the U. S. Marine Corps, presently serving with his outfit as a first lieutenant in the Mediterranean area.

There seems to have been a growing practice at the White House recently of announcing presidential visitors after they have been there.

For a long time, the White House announced a pretty complete appointment schedule for the President a day in advance. Now, the first appointment list given out for publication rarely is complete and a number of appointments are added the next day.

This may reflect a White House effort to keep the President's calling list more flexible and easier to change. It is sometimes embarrassing to the White House to cancel or delay an appointment once it has been announced.

Eight-year old David Eisenhower was so impressive on the Gettysburg golf course last weekend that a spectator watching the President's grandson hit practice shots observed, "That kid will win the open at the age of 12."

The once-tranquil Gettysburg Hotel, where White House staff members, press, radio and picture corps reside when Mr. Eisenhower is at his farm, was really jumping this past weekend.

It seemed that every few minutes another bus discharged a load of high school students visiting the famous battlefield. Many of them were en route for sightseeing in Washington.

It was virtually impossible to get into the dining room at certain hours of the day. And added to the school children, there were hundreds of adults in Gettysburg for the weekend to visit their sons and daughters at Gettysburg College. It was a special mothers' weekend at the school.

Sees Agreement

THE U. S. and Russia eventually will agree on a disarmament plan, Harold E. Stassen, the President's disarmament aide, tells reporters in Washington after delivering a half-hour report to President Eisenhower. He held disarmament talks in London. (International)
